COCKFIGHTING IN OKLAHOMA

Widespread Illegal Conduct, Political Activism to Repeal State Anti-Cockfighting Law

Based on multi-state investigations, no state has more illegal cockfighting than Oklahoma, with illegal pits operating in the state and hundreds of gamecock farm operators raise fighting birds for battle all over the world. Animal Wellness Action has dubbed Oklahoma the “cockfighting capital of the United States.”

It is also a state where cockfighters are politically active, with an organization called the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission, including a well-funded political action committee working to decriminalize cockfighting. Its political action committee has raised more than $170,000 and made political donations to dozens of elected officials, mainly to candidates for state Senate and state House seats.

The OGC’s work is just a more organized form of opposition to the state’s anti-cockfighting law. In fact, since voters outlawed cockfighting and made combat and associated activities state felonies, the cockfighting community has worked aggressively every year to unwind the law. In the years after the voter-imposed law was enacted, there were often more than a half dozen bills introduced to repeal the law, or to provide counties with an option to suspend the law.

The effort to decriminalize cockfighting in Oklahoma is a little puzzling given there is an overlapping and comprehensive federal statute that criminalizes cockfighting and association activities. In short, even if the cockfighters were to succeed in their long-shot campaign to weaken Oklahoma’s anti-animal fighting law, they’ll still face the risk of felony arrest for their conduct.

Possessing fighting birds and trafficking them is explicitly outlawed and is a felony under federal law. The federal Animal Welfare Act makes it “unlawful for any person to knowingly sell, buy, possess, train, transport, deliver, or receive any animal for purposes of having the animal participate in an animal fighting venture.” (U.S.C. 2156 Section 26, Subsection (b)). Violators face up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine per violation.

That said, enforcement at the state and federal level has been spotty and weak. According to a survey by the District Attorneys of Oklahoma released to the Legislature in March 2023, there were an average of 1.7 enforcement actions against cockfighters per year, since Oklahoma voters made cockfighting illegal 21 years ago. That is the case even though Animal Wellness Action and Showing Animals Kindness and Respect have provided a roadmap for major cockfighters operating throughout the state, though certainly concentrated in southeast Oklahoma.

And even in some cases where there were busts, meting out of strong penalties to perpetrators has not occurred. In March 2021, the Bryan County Sheriff raided a major cockfighting complex in Allison reporting that 200-300 participants scattered when police vehicles appeared. The facility had bleachers and concessions stands. Though dozens of cockfighters were cited, only one was prosecuted and, in the end, received a fine for his activities. In neighboring Atoka County, in Stringtown, Animal Wellness Action and Showing Animals Respect and Kindness (SHARK) reported an illegal fighting arena to Atoka County Sheriff Tony Head, but the sheriff refused to interrupt the fights or make any arrests despite being provided with detailed information about a regular fighting schedule.

In 2023, though, there have been more arrests – perhaps ironically because of the OGC’s open contempt for state law and the visibility gained through the effort to decriminalize cockfighting. In June, three men were arrested in Marshall County for illegal cockfighting and charged with possessing birds for fighting. Individuals are also charged with having and operating a cockfighting pit west of Madill.

Two weeks prior to that, the District Attorney in Oklahoma County filed 59 felony counts for cockfighting-related activities, notably against a couple for being in possession of “a large number of roosters.” Investigators with the Oklahoma City Animal Welfare Division had earlier confiscated 93 game-type birds, according to affidavits filed in the case.

In August, Carter County prosecutors charged seven men, including a leader of the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission, with felony offenses related to illegal cockfighting, stemming from a bust of a cockfighting pit in Ratliff City, Oklahoma. Four others face misdemeanor charges for an event dubbed as the “Asian Gaff Championship.” According to The Ardmoreite, “deputies broke up the illegal cockfighting event” in June, “confiscating [about 60] fighting roosters and equipment while impounding 20 vehicles and trailers.” There were 170 to 180 people present for the cockfight, which occurred in the Fox/Graham area.

Among those charged with a felony offense was Chance Campo, a district leader with the so-called Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission. Carter County District Attorney Melissa Handke charged Mr. Campo with the felony offense of servicing and facilitating a cockfight and also a misdemeanor offense of being a spectator at a cockfight. In the end, the court dramatically reduced charges against the accused.

AWA believes that dozens of illegal pits operate throughout the state and that there are hundreds of major cockfighting breeding and training farms, with many of them concentrated in southeast

Oklahoma. This report covers just some of the major players we've investigated. They are engaging in transparently illegal conduct despite a strong state law and a comprehensive federal law that each makes cockfighting and associated activities a felony.

In 2002, voters passed State Question 687 to criminalize staged fights. The provisions of the enacted statute included penalty provisions in line with the state's anti-dogfighting statute, not only banning the staged fights but also the possession of fighting animals and the possession of fighting implements. It is a misdemeanor to be a spectator at a cockfight and a felony to operate a fighting facility.

This report includes information on some of the most egregious players in the cockfighting industry. Here are some highlights.

- B.L. Kozad of Comanche County in southwest Oklahoma defiantly appeared on HBO Real Sports with several other cockfighters and all but challenged law enforcement to arrest him for a wide range of illegal animal fighting activities, claiming a constitutional right to engage in cockfighting and showing off his cockfighting farm in Indianhoma.
- BNTV, a cockfighting broadcaster based in the Philippines, toured what they considered to be the largest and best-performing U.S. gamefowl farms, as a marketing opportunity for the U.S.-based cockfighters to ship birds to the Asian nation. BNTV featured 12 Oklahomans who touted the fighting prowess of their birds, with many talking about winning international cockfighting derbies. Animal Wellness Action downloaded the videos before BNTV and the cockfighters realized how incriminating these testimonials were. All videos are linked in this report.
- Perhaps one of the most massive gamefarms located in Oklahoma is run by Bobby Fairchild in Coalgate, Coal County. Fairchild has a criminal history. In 2008 the criminal arrest warrant is made for Bobby Fairchild for conspiracy to distribute controlled substances and conspiracy to commit money laundering using his gamefarm as cover for his dealings with the Mexican poly-drug trafficking cartel known as the Gulf Carte. (Criminal Complaint Case Number 08-MJ-0105-SPS filed in the Eastern District of Oklahoma and available upon request.)
- Oklahoma cockfighters exported more roosters to Guam for fighting purposes than any other state. There is no legitimate reason for this number of roosters to be shipped to Guam. Guam has no broiler bird or laying hen industry, and it has no show fowl circuit. Our report documents that the people shipping the fighting animals are unmistakably involved in illegal fighting, and that the transports are occurring only because other cockfighters are willing to pay thousands of dollars for birds with good fighting bloodlines. The offspring of birds who win major derbies are the ones coveted by other cockfighters, who can win cash prizes and trophies if their birds prevail in derbies.

The two top sellers – John Bottoms (and wife Brenda) of LeFlore County and Bill McNatt of Haskell County – accounted for over 40 percent of the 11,500 birds shipped by cockfighters to the small U.S. territory in the western Pacific. John Bottoms’ quotes from an advertisement video for his birds include statements like, “They got to be super game. You know, to be hit with that big a knife and the shock it puts on them, they got to have a will to live.”

The Commission touts candidates who align with the group’s goals and made dozens of political contributions, including to Rep. J.J. Humphrey, who is the lead sponsor of HB 2530 to decriminalize cockfighting.

In 2023, Governor Stitt made a video for a cockfighting rally, which he couldn’t attend personally, but wanted to share his support for their efforts. This video was quickly deleted by YouTube for violating their community standards against animal cruelty. There was worldwide condemnation of the governor’s outspoken support of cockfighting. Some days later, his press secretary walked back the statement and indicated the governor would not sign legislation to decriminalize cockfighting.

In 2022, Representative Humphrey introduced a bill to gut the penalties in Oklahoma’s anti-cockfighting law. His bill also sought to decriminalize training and possessing birds to fight them. He reintroduced this bill in January 2023 as HB 2530, and it died in the Senate. A separate bill from Senator Lonnie Paxton also died without any floor action in the state Senate.

In arguing for his bill, Humphrey mentioned allowing Oklahomans to make money by raising and training fighting animals and shipping them to Guam and the Philippines to make money. But exporting fighting birds to any other jurisdiction, whether a state, territory, or foreign nation, is also a federal felony.

It’s clear that the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission and other proponents of the Humphreys bill are using proceeds from illegal cockfighting and gambling activities to lobby and fund state lawmakers on this subject.

There is no prospect that Congress will weaken that federal animal fighting law. In fact, there is a strong chance that the Congress will again strengthen the law during consideration of the Farm bill in the 118th Congress.

In 2018, when the U.S. House considered an amendment to make animal fighting a felony on every inch of U.S. terrain, Oklahoma’s two most senior Congressmen, U.S. Representatives Tom Cole and Frank Lucas, along with the overwhelming majority of Republicans and Democrats, voted in favor of the national law. Not a single Senator opposed that legislation. Law enforcement agencies and sheriffs enthusiastically backed the federal laws against animal fighting, as did all state and national veterinary organizations. The National Chicken Council supported the national law against cockfighting.

When Oklahoma voters approved the anti-cockfighting law in 2002, they did so at the recommendation, among others, of then Oklahoma Governor Frank Keating and U.S. Senator Jim Inhofe. The Oklahoma Supreme Court upheld the law as constitutional in a unanimous decision after cockfighters challenged it. Every legal challenge to the federal law has been stymied, and you can see a summary of all the major legal cases here.

This report provides detailed information that connects individuals throughout Oklahoma to the cockfighting industry. Based on the assembled evidence, these individuals are routinely committing felony-level penalties.

Oklahoma Breeders Exporting to Guam

According to records Animal Wellness Action has received from the Guamanian Commissioner of Agriculture, the total number of roosters shipped to Guam since 2019 from the United States is 11,516.

Oklahoma ranks #1 among suppliers in the U.S., having shipped 5,143 roosters to Guam. This is 45% of the total shipped to Guam. This list includes those who shipped the most to Guam.

Lester Hasbel is deceased as of this report's last update. His roosters went to Anthony Devore, the President of the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission.

While investigating cockfighters in Oklahoma, we discovered their front group, the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission. Although they claim to not be involved in the illegal activity of cockfighting, Chance Campo was fired from the Commission after he was arrested for cockfighting in August 2023 and the Commission had to distance themselves from the obvious. Their PAC is called the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission PAC.

In this 24-minute interview by BNTV, John Bottoms describes himself as a long knife cockfighter and handler and describes in detail that he currently makes a living possessing and training birds for the purpose of cockfighting, which is expressly forbidden under the federal law.

- “Yes sir, we’ve done very well over the last year’s long knife.”
- “John what part do you like best...”
 - – “Training....I train roosters for a lot of people.”
- “Well I’ve always thought the greatest thing about the long knife – and actually from maybe 85’ to 2003 that’s what we competed 80% in was the long knife and the adrenalin, you know, of – when you turn one loose – I mean – that’s the greatest thing...that’s the rush.”
- “...one of the things that I regard most about a gamecock is one that can win when he’s hurt, you know. And when you get too much height then it’s so hard to balance when he gets and cuts on him.”
- “I love a rooster that hits back and can win, you know, because – you know, at the Pit Masters not too many roosters got out clean.”
- “So many people think the long knife is one fly...one of Bruce’s roosters was a monster that got knocked down and won and almost 10-minute time limit and he won on pure gameness....you got to have game roosters.”

- “They got to be super game. You know, to be hit with that big a knife and the shock it puts on them, they got to have a will to live.”
- “They (short knife roosters) need to start almost the same way as a long knife rooster but after the start they need to start hitting up toward the neck area because it’s just hard to kill one with a little knife.”
- And when he’s injured very bad it don’t take a very strong lick to stop him, you know. And I prefer the Mexican knife compared to the socket short knife.”
- “My Lacy blood come from John Slavin – which I’ve trained a lot of roosters for John – you know, very good roosters.”
- “It was one of Gene Betia’s yellow legged hatch cocks and we bought him the second time he fought it and then a real good friend of ours knew him well and bought us a hen and that’s the original blood we started with.”
- “I’m liking them. They deep cut, deep body cutting roosters.”
- “Deep cutting and wonderful livability...you can hurt them and with their last dying breath they can kill a rooster...a lot of roosters that’s plenty game but they can’t take it....let them get hit with one of those four inch knives and see if they don’t have to be game to take it.”
- “I watched Bruce and Joey win a fight in the Pitmasters...they got him destroyed in the first buckle and nine and a half minutes into the fight he reached up and grabbed that rooster – it looked like he didn’t have a prayer – and hit him and stuck in the head and that rooster (tilts head back) and I mean it probably wasn’t ten seconds left before the time limit and he beat and win and I mean won straight on want-to and gameness.”
- A lot of the deep cutting ability comes from a rooster that intend to hurt the other rooster and the lacies cut really well and boy they got a lot of athletic ability but the yellow legged hatch cut so deep...and I’ve won a lot of fights with them hurt really bad.”
- “And that’s what we do, you know, pretty much for a living.”

John Bottoms has shipped over 1700 roosters via U.S mail to Guam according to records we've received from the Guamanian Commissioner of Agriculture. There is no poultry industry to speak of in Guam, but there is an open and obvious cockfighting industry thriving there.

Bill McNatt advertising extremely high prices for birds, which are typical of fighting birds and not breeding or hobby birds.

Bill McNatt sharing information on how to determine which birds will be good fighting birds.

the feet and legs: never breed a cock or hen whose toes turn inboard towards each other. "Little feet" are a sign of Oriental blood. Shy away from this. And finally, all this hocus pocus about the prop toes lining up with the spurs and reading the leg scales, etc., is at best, hocus pocus.

Both cocks and hens should have long, low set wings. Wings set on high, big heads, and short tails are a sure sign of cold blood. When viewed from the side, both cocks and hens should carry their backs at a 50 degree angle. Flat backs and lowheadedness go hand in hand. Low heads or giving the head is a major fault. Pick a hot day, and spar the brood cock until he has fought down, about 20 minutes. Some won't require over five minutes. Watch closely, to see if after he has become Winded he gives his head Does he stop hitting, and start pecking and lunging and giving his head instead? If he gives his head, keep him out of the brood pen. In the early buckles, watch very closely WHERE he hits. He should hit deep into the body, up under the wings and hit hard enough to bring out the fine feathers under the wings.

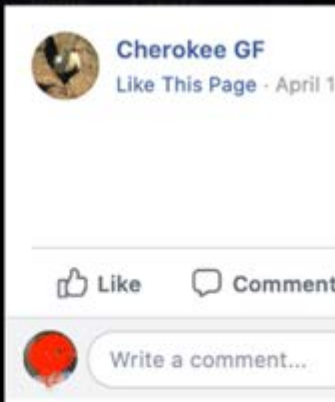

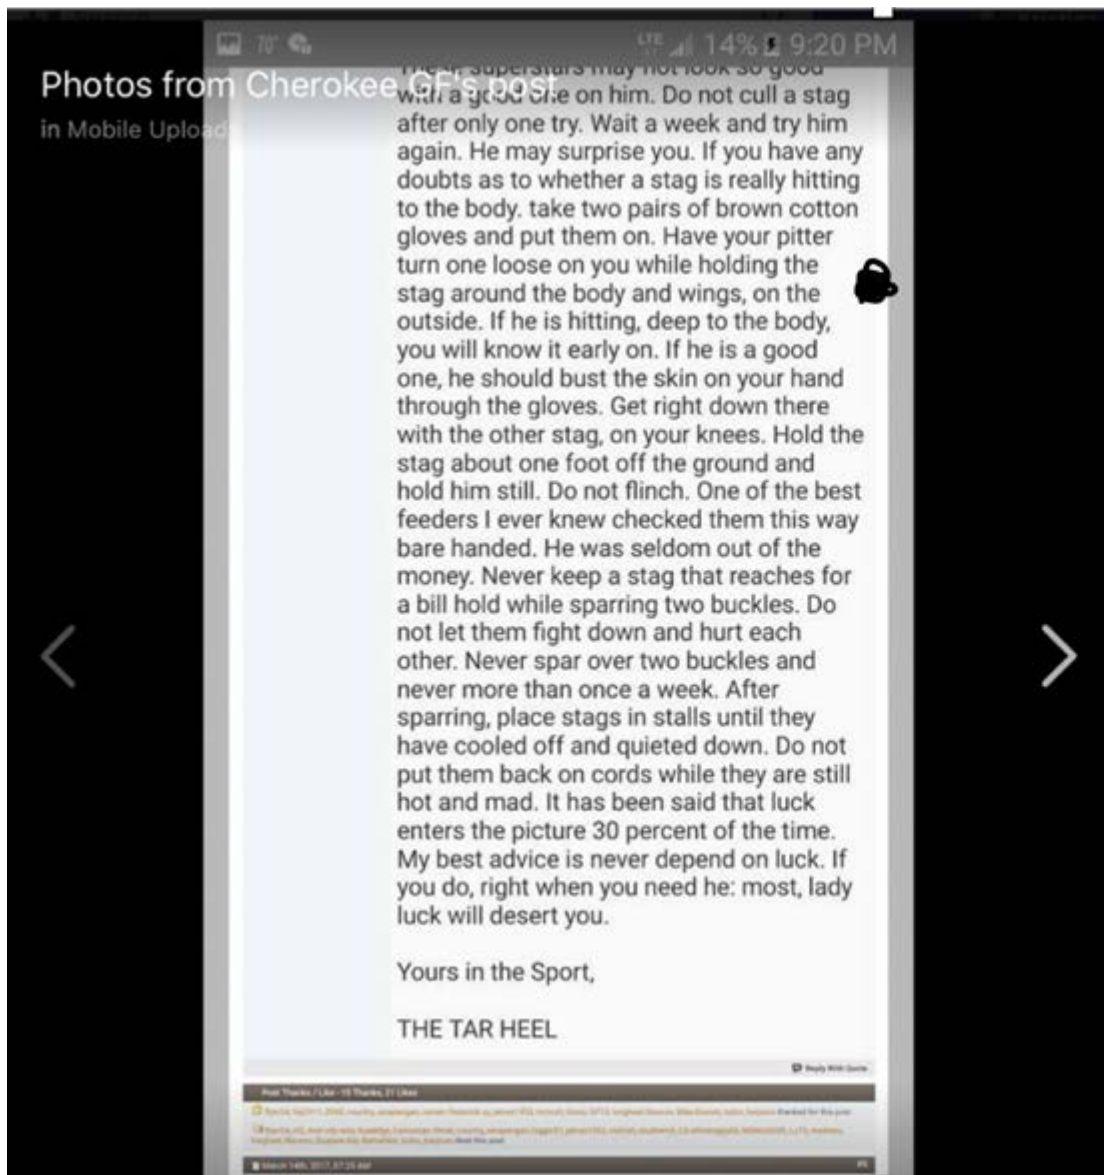

You can select battle fowl using this set of instructions. The best fowl in the world will produce from ten to thirty percent culls, if not more. If you do not possess the ability to weed out these culls, you are no better off than if you were breeding trash fowl. When you spar your stags, bill them, face them twice, and set them down QUICKLY about three feet apart. Have two others pitting for you so you can watch. Never spar over two buckles. Identify the good ones, wait a week and spar these into each other. These superstars may not look so good

On the cover of Cockfights Magazine.

After an article was published about our findings, his gamefarm's Facebook page was deleted.

This is his personal Facebook page, which includes the picture of himself on the cover of a cockfighting magazine and a large list of friends that include cockfighters and other exporters.

This is a video (password: awareosters) of his property, including roosters tied out and separated, typical of gamefarms breeding roosters for cockfighting.

Lester Hasbel DECEASED IN 2021

8806 N Harrison
Shawnee, OK 74804
405.793.5409

Birds that were in Hasbel's possession have been transferred to Anthony Devore, President of the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission, and Lester's son in law. Hasbel was a well-known cockfighter and is still included in this report to describe his legacy and how it's intertwined with the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission.

Interview with BNTV, a cockfighting broadcaster in the Philippines. Hasbel was described as their “Hero of the pit.” He describes how many derbies he’s won, the refereeing that he did and his breeding and exportation of birds for the purpose of cockfighting.

BNTV video interview password - awaroosters

- “I was cocker of the year at several pits.”
- Describing his winning birds - “So when they would charge in after them, he was just killing them. Just cutting them to pieces.”
- The host asks Lester to describe the rules he’s made when referring fights. Lester states, “...when you raise them up they got to peck or they’re going to lose.” and “I said we’re going to do this just like we do on the long knife.” And “long knife and short knife is the same way now.”
- “best cock I ever fought...I paid him $450 and people thought I was crazy.” and “it put me on the map.”
- Lester Hasbel has 138 fly pens and another farm where there are 219 stags and Lester said, “I have 24 cocks that we show”.
- The host asked Lester what types of birds he has ready to sell now and he says, “I probably have 60 already on the ground.” And then he shared his phone number for customers to call.

Jeff Pearce & son Blake Pearce, Policy Chairman of the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission
112796 S. 4610 Rd.
Sallisaw, OK 74955
918.775.0413

Blake’s father, Jeff Pearce, has exported over 60 birds to Guam which is steeped in the cockfighting industry.

Most incriminating, Blake and his father appear on YouTube being interviewed by a cockfighting broadcaster in the Philippines by the name of BNTV. BNTV toured what they consider the largest and most impressive U.S. gamefowl farms supporting their country's cockfighting industry and 12 Oklahomans are interviewed. BNTV has since pulled their YouTube channel making these videos unavailable to the public, but we were able to download the video before they pulled it down. Password - awaroosters

- The host recognizes Blake, Jeff's son, is there with him and is very involved and Jeff states, "Yeah, it runs in the blood, he's got it from both sides. My father was a rooster fighter. My wife's father was a rooster fighter, so he has no choice." (Blake Pearce is the Secretary and Policy Chairman of the Oklahoma Gamefowl Commission and is documented further in this report)
- When talking about his bloodlines success he states, "We've been very successful with them" and, "We've done very well with them there."
- The host asks how to get in touch about the famous birds, and Jeff states, "Call me in the fall...I'll have young trios come October."

Jeff Pearce exports to the Philippines using a broker.

Bobby and Melinda Fairchild
Clear Creek Gamefarm
34.44753, -96.15663
E1770 Rd
Coalgate, OK 74538

Bobby Fairchild's legal history includes using his gamefarm operation as cover to drug running and money laundering. See US District Court Eastern District of Oklahoma, case number 08-MJ-0105-SPS for details. He is still operating.

Facebook page

Bobby was interviewed on BNTV, a cockfighting broadcaster in the Philippines. This interview (password: awaroosters) also includes now ex-Mayor Jesry Palmares of Passi City, Lloilo, Philippines who is there to visit Bobby. It's described that Mayor Palmares sponsored Bobby Fairchild's participation in the World Slasher Cup many times. It's also described that Mayor Jesry Palmares has been importing and raising birds from Bobby Fairchild's breeding stock for over a dozen years for the purpose of cockfighting.

- Host: "I've had your game fowl through Mayor Jesry Palmares and they been winning for us. Especially the gray and the red one, the kelso."
- Jesry describes coming to Mr. Fairchild's gamefarm for the first time in 2001 and he invited Bobby to the Philippines the next year. Jesry went on to say that Mr. Fairchild then started "shipping battle roosters. "and "from there on Bobby's been coming to the Philippines almost every year."
- "real nice and well-proven" (Bobby speaking of his bloodlines)
- Speaking of selecting the best birds, he says, "we cull cull cull cull" and "they got to have confirmation and athletic ability".
- Jesry describes having raised birds from Mr. Fairchild and that Bobby has been telling him what and how to do it. "For the past 16 or 17 years that I have been breeding these greys and kelso, I have not experienced a bad situation, of course you win you lose."
- Then Bobby says, "If we ever have them that's 100% winners, Mayor, they wouldn't be for sale." And Jesry says, "That's the beauty of cockfighting you know, I mean everyone has to strive hard to win."

This is a video (password: awaroosters) broadcasted by PitGames.tv called "Breeder of the Week", and is from his farm when he lived in KY. He describes carrying a very successful bloodline. Birds that win fights can sell for hundreds of dollars.

- "probably 1100 roosters here right now"
- "they have been extremely good"

- “pointing to a trophy...”this was the Mel Simms tribute at mid-America which you know now I carry the Mel Simms black line and I’m very proud of them”
- “I liked going to events and stuff but I love being a breeder.”

Bobby Fairchild’s birds’ prices are indicative of fighting birds, proven bloodlines that win derbies are sold for top dollar which he described in the video above.

Shipping birds through USPS.

Bobby Fairchild at a derby and it's described in a comment that he won.

Interview dated January 2020 in the “Purebred Warrior”:

“Mhar Delaben: Your birds are sought after around the Globe, how do you make sure that they will perform as advertising? What do you do to maintain or exceed your status?

Bobby Fairchild: Well, for one thing, we never take for granted that they are what they would want. Continuously look for different ways to improve the performance of these purebred warriors. Of course, we do not nor will we participate in illegal cockfights in the United States. I have never been to an illegal cockfight nor do I intend to, but we keep up with the things that our customers are looking for and we check on the performance to make sure that our friends and customers continue to reap the results that they have always reaped and we stay as close to the solid foundation as we can.”

“Mhar Delaben: Have you tried competing in the Philippines? (What are your experience)

Bobby Fairchild: Yes, we have completed a few times with our friend Jessery Palmaris, Jessery has brought me to the Philippines more than once, treated me with the utmost respect and has come to be a true friend. I look forward to the day that I get to see Jessery again probably on Filipino soil, Jessery and I have had very good success. At the world slasher cup as well as the Candelaria, we haven't won them yet together but I see it will happen. We've always been a very strong force."

"Mhar Delaben: Would you name some Breeders in the Philippines that were using your birds in their campaign?

Bobby Fairchild: Well, I will name a few of them but some of the big-name breeders like to keep their secrets since they spent good money in the fowl that they have. My number one customer in the Philippines and always been is Jessery Palmaris."

Mr. Fairchild built a trophy room.

- "I like to select out the ones that's maybe head and shoulders above the rest, and maybe spar them, you know and give you a good idea of what kind of talent they have."
- "Oh yeah I want to spar them, you know to make sure they got some ability to hit and cut and reach and do everything that I like to do. I wouldn't breed one that I didn't at least get to see spar several times to satisfy me that they're just doing their job."

A Brief History on Cock Fighting

At one time cockfights were actually held in our nations capital. President Andrew Jackson kept fighting cocks in the white house stables, employing a man named Jack Freer to feed and condition them. Such statesmen as Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Martin Van Buren, Governor John Floyd of Virginia, and many others met in the committee rooms of congress to match rooster favorites. George Washington and his friend , Lord Fairfax, were ardent cockers and in Washington's personal effects was found literature on the subject. Both were regular subscribers to a cockfighting magazine published in England. At that time cockfighting was America's National Sport and the fighting cock lost out to the American Eagle as the Seal of the United Statesby only ONE vote after a bitter battle.

As proof against the contention that cockfighting is cruel: Abraham Lincoln, who loved cockfighting, was so tender hearted that he wouldn't hunt, and as a boy was whipped many times for opening traps to free the animals. As a man , Lincoln attended and refereed many cockfights, thus his nickname Honest Abe. Benjamin Franklin also attended and refereed cockfights. Thomas Jefferson was a breeder and fighter of gamecocks. Other Famous men who were ardent cockers were: Julius Caesar, Alexander the Great, Themistocles, Queen Elizabeth of England, James 1 and his son Prince Henry, Charles 1, Charles 11, Sir Walter Raleigh and the Duke of Essex.

The oldest Known cockpit in the world is Number Ten Downing Street, Official residence of Winston Churchill, whose ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough, was a famous cock fighter. The original pit was erected there by King Henry VIII and was immortalized in a painting by the famous artist Van Dyck. King James 1 was devoted to cock fighting. Cockfighting has been a compulsory course of instruction in some English schools for more that 1000 years.

Cocks are fought in every state in America. Several times a year tournaments are held in the South. Small tournaments, derbies, and concourses are held every month all over the country during the fighting season, which runs from Thanksgiving to July 4th. Cocks are not fought in the summer due to heat and molt.
